WILLARD STARTS TRAINING TO-DAY FOR DEMPSEY BOUT

Challenger No Longer the Big Favorite in Betting He Was Before the Champion Arrived in Camp D

By Robert Edgren.

TOLEDO, O. June & ESS WILLARD will begin his training here this afternoon. Yesterday workmen were busy putting up an open-air ring at the Casino under given up much of his time and at-the champion's direction.

It is the kind of a ring Willard usually insists upon having at his training quarters—a double roped ring with solid platform and well Jess spent most of the day with Tex Rickard. The big fellow attracts a world of attention wherever he goes. He wears a neat lightweight gray action as he does on the street,

Dempsey put in one of his hardest days yesterday. At 3 in the morning he boxed twelve furious rounds with his whole staff of sparring partier since Sept. 9, 1914, when Stromners. He ripped into big Bill Tate reientlessly as Bill had taken a day boli won a race in the same time, sof rest on Sunday. Dempsey is fond of thinking that Bill Tate is a dusky supplianting the then fastest mark ever recorded over the same track. King Plaudit was naturally acclaimed when he returned to the Yesterday Dempsey hit Tate so hard over the heart that there was some suspicion of broken ribs. It proved to be groundless, but William felt so caved in that he asked for a short vacation. Dempsey has decided that he won't box again until Saturday. He is almost on edge, and his trainers peared to be safely in the lead, "ran say there is no sense in letting him box every day in the present spell of bot weather. There's too much danger of overtraining. They expect to have

They stand around Tex Rickard in platoons, regarding each other with suspicion and buttonholing perfect strangers to impress the incontrovertible logic of their candidacy. Tex couldn't swing a cat by the tail without bowling over half a dozen of them. One of the latest is Bat Nelson. Bat explains that his well known qualities of honesty and fearlessness make him the logical candidate, as this may be a tough one to give a decision on and neither of the contestants wants any the worst of it.
